From the Principal's Desk

It is important to reflect on what we have accomplished over the last six months. None of us could have predicted that 2020 would turn out how it has. Reflecting on this ... leads us to have a tendency to dwell on the negative as opposed to the positive. I think one of the biggest lessons we have learned throughout the past six months is resilience. Resilience is how you cope with stress, times where you might feel things are out of your control, and when things don't go to plan. Someone who is resilient will be able to handle these times well, and, when they are over, bounce back, better off than they were beforehand. So far this year we have all had plenty of opportunities to practise our resilience.

Moving forward into the next half of the year our lives are only going to get busier. This will inevitably create stress as our workload increases and time becomes more precious. But we can take the resilience which we have learned during these past few months to attack these challenges with optimism, and without getting overwhelmed by the negative emotions we all feel under pressure.

I hope you all have a great holiday. It definitely feels like we haven't had any real time off since the start of February, over 22 weeks ago. So make sure you have a really good break. (Joshua Pearson, Head Boy)

Sound advice, Josh.
